

Objectives of teaching English at secondary level

The objectives of English language teaching at the secondary level are to equip students with the necessary skills in listening, speaking, reading, and writing to communicate effectively and comprehend the language. These four language skills are essential for academic success and everyday communication.

1. Listening: The aim is to develop students' ability to understand spoken English in various contexts, such as conversations, lectures, and media. Students should be able to grasp the main ideas, specific information, and implied meanings. This helps in improving comprehension and promotes active listening in both academic and real-life situations.

2. Speaking: The objective is to enhance students' oral communication skills. They should be able to express themselves clearly, fluently, and confidently in different social and academic contexts. This includes engaging in conversations, discussions, presentations, and debates, using appropriate grammar, pronunciation, and vocabulary.

3. Reading: Reading instruction aims to improve students' ability to comprehend written texts, both literary and non-literary. Students should be able to identify the main ideas, infer meanings, analyze the content, and evaluate the text critically. This skill helps them in understanding diverse genres and fosters a habit of reading for knowledge and pleasure.

4. Writing: The goal is to develop students' ability to express ideas clearly and effectively in written form. Students should be able to write coherently, organize ideas logically, and use proper grammar, punctuation, and vocabulary. Writing tasks range from creative writing to academic essays, reports, and formal letters, promoting both creativity and accuracy.

Ultimately, English teaching at the secondary level aims to develop these skills holistically, enabling students to use English proficiently in both academic and everyday settings.
